THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN FAMILY VIOLENCE & INJURY: ARE WE DOING ENOUGH IN AUSTRALIA?

WEDNESDAY 25 – FRIDAY 27 NOVEMBER 2015
THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

The Australian Injury Prevention Network (AIPN) is delighted to announce the latest conference program has been released for this year’s 12th Australasian Injury Prevention and Safety Promotion Conference being held Wednesday 25 - Friday 27 November at the University of Sydney.

The program includes a dedicated symposium on “The relationship between family violence and injury: Are we doing enough in Australia?” featuring leading Australian family violence researchers and practitioners, including:

- Maltreatment Prevention: But it’s hardly injury prevention...or is it? Deborah Scott, Australian Institute of Family Studies
- Coronial Data on Family Violence
  Lyndel Bugeja, Coroners Court of Victoria
- An Empirical Insight into Injuries Arising from Family Violence in Separated Families Rachel Carson, Australian Institute of Family Studies
- A Public Health Response to Family Violence
  Joan Ozanne-Smith, Monash University Department of Forensic Medicine
- Hospital-treated Assault Injury to Women Due to Intimate Partner Violence
  Angela Clapperton, Monash Injury Research Institute

Featuring a range of international and national keynote speakers, over 150 session presenters and a dedicated workshop on the role of media and advocacy in injury prevention, the three-day conference will be an opportunity for all those working in the areas of injury prevention and safety promotion to come together, network, share latest research, and discuss policy and practice developments.

Thematic sessions on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Communities, Falls Prevention and Ageing, Water Safety and Drowning Prevention, Road and Transport Safety and Child and Family Safety are also included across the conference program.

Registrations are now open for the three-day conference, although those wishing to attend the symposium only can purchase a one-day registration.

Three-day registrations start from $895 for AIPN members, with non-member early bird rates being $1045. One-day registrations are $440 for the early bird rate or $550 for the standard rate. Early bird rates close 25 September, so get in now to save on your registration!

Registration includes all sessions, morning tea, afternoon tea and lunch catering, as well as the full conference handbook and electronic abstracts book. Full registrations also include attendance at the conference dinner.
